Who is the man August was named for?

The emperor was a man of many names. He was born Gaius Octavius, the grandnephew of Julius Caesar. He took the extended name Gaius Julius Caesar Octavianus in 44 BCE after Caesar's assassination. Though in English texts, he was often referred to simply as Octavian. Then in 31 BCE, he defeated Mark Antony and Cleopatra to gain control over the empire. Finally in 27 BCE, when he was named emperor, he was given the honorary title Augustus.

Painting Positivity!

For over four months, staff, members, and the amazing volunteers from Pantilio, brainstormed, conversed, voted, and eventually created the most amazing piece of artwork that will be hung outside the front door. Many different members picked up a brush and painted a small, or a large bit of this mural and we hope that every time they walk past it they look at it with pride and think, “I had something to do with this”. Or look at a word and think “I chose that word” It was truly a team effort.
